A Message From the Board Chair and President

Children’s Home Society of Virginia enjoyed another year of exciting developments as the agency’s board leadership and staff worked together to assure every child has a loving and permanent family in which to thrive. As a result of their dedication and continued strategic focus, CHS has made significant strides toward achieving the objectives of the agency’s strategic plan.

Highlights of the year include:

- A 48% increase in total adoptions, a 44% increase in birth parent counseling clients and a 75% increase in the number of days we provided temporary foster care to infants and toddlers in need
- The adoption of 52 children from the public foster care system through the CHS Partnership for Adoptions Program
- Engaged in a year-long strategic branding process that resulted in a CHS marketing initiative, including a new agency logo and tag line
- Promoted CHS services and the availability of children waiting to be adopted through a multi media advertising campaign
- Secured funding to upgrade CHS computer technology to enhance agency service delivery and business operations
- The Community Resource Board held another successful gala, netting more than $54,000 at the “Hooray for Hollywood” Ball

CHS is committed to our mission, which we achieve in partnership with the CHS families who open their hearts and homes to children and through the support of our generous donors. We sincerely thank the many corporate, foundation and individual contributors whose support makes it possible for CHS to reach out to birth parents in crisis, adoptive families who desire to create or expand their families through the gift of adoption and adoptees who are provided services by our professional staff.

As an adoptee who was raised by a loving family and was able as an adult to unite with her birth family, and as an adoptive parent of two delightful children, we share first hand knowledge of the incredibly positive impact that adoption has in the lives of children and families and upon the entire community. Therefore, thank you for a great year! We hope that you will continue to support CHS as we build upon our successes and create even more loving adoptive families across the Commonwealth.

Sincerely,

Micki Stout

The Ways We Serve

Infant Adoption

It was May, and “Jody” had nowhere to go. A college student, she was eight months pregnant and had never told her family. With the help of her CHS social worker, Jody determined that it would be in her baby’s best interests to grow up in a loving adoptive family. She mustered the courage to tell her parents, who supported Jody’s decision. They opted for an open adoption so that she could choose the family who would rear her child. When Jody was admitted into the hospital, the adoptive mother was by her side in the delivery room and the first person to hold the baby. Today, the adoptive family maintains contact with Jody and they call Jody’s mother “Nana 2.”

Birth Parent Counseling Services

“Sandy” was pregnant with her third child, abandoned by the birth father, estranged from her family and living with her kids in a local shelter. Fearful of the future for her young family, she considered adoption and called CHS. Through a series of pregnancy counseling sessions, she and the CHS social worker explored all her options. Her dream was to reconnect with her family, but she feared their rejection. The social worker encouraged her to reach out to her family and facilitated a meeting. As a result, she and the kids moved in with her family and she gave birth to a healthy baby girl three months later. The counseling from CHS and the reconciliation with Sandy’s family gave her the emotional and physical support she needed to parent her children.

Temporary Foster Care & Adoption

A single mother, “Beverly” was overwhelmed with caring for her medically and physically challenged year-old son. Among his special needs, he required assistance breathing and he had to be fed through a nasal tube. Beverly wanted to adopt him into a family better able to cope with his challenges. The little boy was placed in a CHS foster home. The foster mother was a pediatric neonatal intensive care nurse, familiar with caring for medically challenged children. The foster mother made regular visits with him to various doctors, had him evaluated by a child development center and made sure he got the medical care he needed. CHS soon identified an adoptive family who welcomed the little boy into their home and he is now thriving with his “forever family.”

If not adopted, 1 in 4 children will end up in jail within 2 years of leaving foster care, more than 1 in 5 will be homeless after turning 18, and fewer than 1 in 6 will earn a high school degree.

Temporary Foster Care & Teen Adoption

Imagine being 12 years old and forced to be the primary caregiver for a 13-month-old brother. A social worker found both boys living in a filthy house with animal droppings and drug paraphernalia everywhere. CHS identified a foster home willing to take both the pre-teen and the baby—a challenging task. Both were later adopted through CHS—again, together—into a loving “forever home.”

Adult Adoptee Reconnects

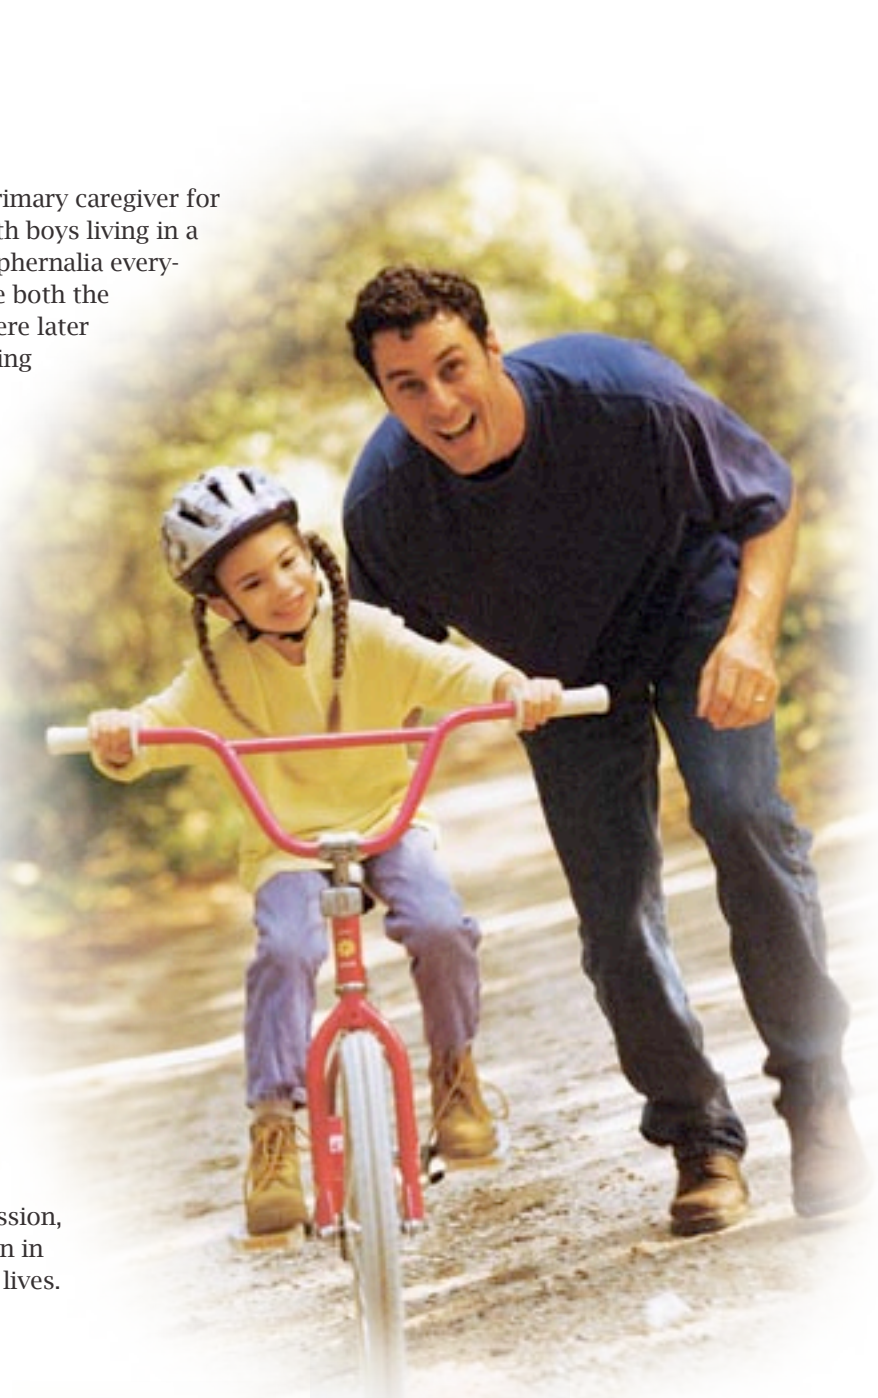

In 1963 “Milly” left her home for a job in the city and met a young man. When she discovered she was pregnant, being on her own, she contacted CHS and gave her son up for adoption.

As an adult, “Brian” contacted CHS to learn about his heritage. CHS provided all they could at the time—non-identifying information about his birth mother. A few years later Milly called CHS with contact information in case her son wanted to reach her.

Ten years went by and Brian called again—this time to discuss locating his birth mother. He filled out an Application for Disclosure. “I hope this is what I think it is,” Milly said when called by CHS staff.

Milly and Brian began corresponding, with CHS acting as an intermediary. They exchanged letters and pictures; after a few months CHS arranged a conference call, where they both shared a desire to meet.

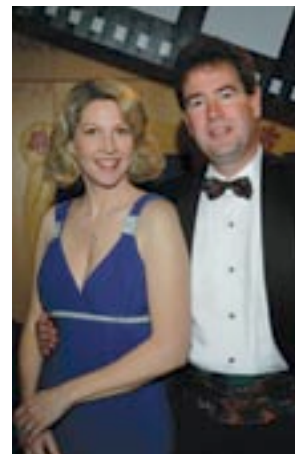

After reporting to the state and being given permission, CHS disclosed Milly’s identity to Brian. They remain in regular contact, happy to be a part of each other’s lives.

CRB rolled out the red

carpet at annual gala

Guests dressed as Hollywood legends walked the red carpet while the paparazzi snapped their pictures. The Community Resource Board held its third annual gala, "Hooray for Hollywood," February 9, 2008 at Children's Museum of Richmond. First Lady Anne Holton joined the likenesses of Elizabeth Taylor, Jack Sparrow and Warren Beatty.

"The food, music and costumes created a fun and energetic atmosphere, giving guests the opportunity to have a good time and learn about the vital services that CHS provides throughout Virginia," noted Kerry Lewis, event chair.

All proceeds help fund CHS's three cornerstone programs: pregnancy counseling, temporary foster care and adoption services. The event was a tremendous success, raising more than $54,000 to support Children's Home Society.
